

Credit Lines for Images

You are required to place a credit line below any of the images you use in your documents. As well, your teacher may require you to cite images in your bibliography. The content of your credit line will depend on what sort of restrictions are attached to use of the image. Please ensure that the images you use are copyright friendly.

1. Your Own Material

If you use a photograph you have taken, provide your name as the author of the photograph. Include a caption describing the image and the credit line giving your name as the author of the image (Figure 1).

Figure 1

Display promoting reading.
Photo: Arlene Anderson.

2. Material Available (With Permission) from the WWW

Many organizations grant permission for you to use their images freely so long as you provide a credit line identifying the source of the image. For example, NASA makes almost all of its images freely available. Figure 2 provides an example of a credit line for a NASA image. Credit is given to NASA in this case because the name of the author is not available.

Figure 2

“Earth in Full View.”
Photo NASA

3. Material Available Under Creative Commons License

An increasing number of private individuals and institutions are allowing members of the public to use their work under a Creative Commons license. Figure 3 shows a photograph from the McCord Museum that can be reproduced for non-commercial purposes under a Creative Commons license. The museum requires users to provide the name of the museum and a catalogue number for the item. Figure 4 shows a photograph obtained from the photo sharing website Flickr. This photograph is also licensed for reproduction under a Creative Commons license. When you write a credit line for images found on Flickr that are licensed under the Creative Commons, provide the name of the author and a link to his/her profile, and information about the terms of licensing as well as a to the Creative Commons page that describes the license.

Figure 3

“North East View, Nortre Dame Street, Montreal.”
Print by John Murray. McCord Museum. M970.67.22
CC BY/NC/ND

Figure 4

“GE Bulb.” Photo by Miguel Navrot CC BY/NC

Bibliographic Citation of Images MLA Style

Your teacher may require you to cite your image in your works cited list. How you cite your image will depend on the source you find it in. Note that you can get help creating citations by using NoodleBib, an online citation maker available through our library website. Below are examples of citations for images from a variety of sources:

A. Images Found in Books (Medium: print)

State the artist's name, the title of the artwork (in italics), the date the work was created (if provided), the name of the institution that houses the work, the city, and publication information for the book in which the work appears. Include the page number and add the word print:

Degas, Edgar. The Dance Class. 1873. Musee d'Orsay, Paris. Paintings That Changed the World: From Lascaux to Picasso. By Klaus Reichold and Bernhard Graf. London: Prestel-Verlag, 1998. 156. Print.

B. Images Found Online (Medium: Web)

Be aware that every effort should be made to identify the author of any images you use, and the institution or person holding the copyright.

Images from Museum Websites

Artist's name. Title of the work (in italics). Date of creation (if provided). Name of the institution or collection that houses or hosts the work. City. Title of the website (in italics). Medium of Publication. Date you downloaded the image and the URL:

Murray, John. North East View, Notre Dame Street, Montreal. 1843. McCord Museum, Montreal. McCord Museum. Web. 21 Apr. 2009 <<http://www.mccordmuseum.qc.ca/en/collection/artifacts/M970.67.22>>.

Images from Websites other than Museums (does not apply to e-books, online magazines, or newspapers.)

Artist's Name (if available). Title or a description of the image. Date created (if provided). Title of the website. Sponsor or owner of the website. Date of e-Publication. Medium consulted. Date of access and the URL.

Example 1: The citation below refers to a photograph retrieved from Flickr, a photo sharing website. If the photographer provides an alias rather than his/her real name, it is acceptable to use this.

Navrot, Miquel. GE Bulb. N.d. Flickr. Yahoo, 12 Nov. 2005. Web. 5 Nov. 2009. <<http://www.flickr.com/photos/mnavrot/64518076/>>.

Example 2: The next citation refers to a photograph available on the Mayo Clinic's website. Neither the photographer's name, nor the date of the photograph are available.

Chickenpox Rash. N.d. MayoClinic.com. Mayo Foundation for Medical Education and Research, 2009. Web. 5 Nov. 2009. <<http://www.mayoclinic.com/health/medical/IM01818>>.

